NAME: _____

Candidate Number: _____

CITY OF LONDON SCHOOL

ENTRANCE EXAMINATION – JANUARY 2008

ENGLISH – GROUP 1

ONE HOUR

SECTION A	:	20 marks
SECTION B	:	10 marks
SECTION C	:	10 marks
SECTION D	:	20 marks
SECTION E	:	40 marks

Answer all the questions in Sections A, B, C and D (together worth 60 marks) in this booklet.

Section E – the Composition – must be written on separate sheets of A4 paper provided. You are advised to spend at least twenty-five minutes on Section E (worth 40 marks)*

Two final pieces of advice:

1) if you find a particular question difficult, do not spend too long worrying about it. Simply move on to the next question. You can always come back to it.
2) Be sure to budget a little time to check through your answers.

SECTION A (20 Marks)

This is a short extract about "guerrilla soldiers". (Think of jungle fighters who 'hit and run', attacking suddenly then melting back into the undergrowth.)

Read the extract carefully and then, using the answer that fits the sense of that sentence best, write A, B, C, D or E in the space for your answer.

Another fundamental characteristic of the guerrilla soldier is his flexibility, his ability to adapt himself to all circumstances, and to convert to his service all the accidents of the action. Against the rigidity of the classical methods of fighting, the guerrilla fighter invents his own tactics at every minute of the fight and constantly surprises the enemy.

In the first place, there are only elastic positions, specific places the enemy cannot pass, and places of diverting him. Frequently the enemy, after easily overcoming difficulties in a gradual advance, is surprised to find himself suddenly and solidly detained without possibilities of moving forward. This is due to the fact that the guerrilla-defended positions, when they have been selected on the basis of a careful study of the ground, are invulnerable. It is not the number of attacking soldiers that counts, but the number of defending soldiers. Once that number has been placed there, it can nearly always hold off a battalion with success. It is a major task of the chiefs to choose well the moment and the place for defending a position without retreat.

The form of attack of a guerrilla army is also different; starting with surprise and fury, irresistible, it suddenly converts itself into total passivity. The surviving enemy, resting, believes that the attacker has departed; he begins to relax, to return to the routine life of the camp or of the fortress, when suddenly a new attack bursts forth in another place, with the same characteristics, while the main body of the guerrilla *band lies in wait to intercept reinforcements. At other times an outpost defending the camp will be suddenly attacked by the guerrilla, dominated and captured. The fundamental thing is surprise and rapidity of attack.

band – small group of fighters*

Extract: Che Guevara, Guerrilla Warfare (Monthly Review Press)

(Passage & adapted questions taken from Black & Finn, 1971)

1 “accidents” (line 3) means

A catastrophes
B slight mishaps
C unexpected events
D misfortunes
E bloodshed Answer: _____

2 “rigidity” (line 4) means

A cruel harshness
B heavy losses
C tactical planning
D professional strictness
E traditional nobility Answer: _____

3 The author holds the optimistic, convinced view that guerrilla positions cannot be captured when they are:

A defended by brave soldiers
B attacked by a small number of soldiers
C strengthened by fortifications
D placed on well chosen sites
E defended by flexible forces Answer: _____

4 “diverting him” (line 8) means:

A attracting the enemy’s hate
B persuading him to ignore something more important
C preventing him from overwhelming one’s defences
D resisting him successfully
E persuading him to scatter his forces Answer: _____

5 Which ONE of the following does the last paragraph (lines 19-29) not advise the guerrillas to do?

A start a fight with a furious attack
B later lull the enemy into a false sense of security
C non-stop attacking until victory is secured
D divide itself into several groups
E switch the point of its attack quickly Answer: _____

SECTION B (10 Marks)

There is an error of spelling, punctuation or grammar in the following sentences. Each sentence contains one mistake. Circle the word or punctuation mark where you think there is an error.

Example 1 Lightening frightened the pets.

Example 2 “Are you all right ” asked Mike.

---

1. The car was parked securely in it’s garage.
2. The tardy schoolboy was desparate to reach the lesson on time.
3. “Keep away from the railway track.” advised the policeman.
4. One of the three woman is clearly a thief!
5. One of the boy’s had run for help.

Please turn over

SECTION C (10 Marks)

In each of these questions one word is printed in capital letters and underlined. Below these you will find a list of words. Choose the word in the list which is the most exact opposite of the word in capitals. Answer by writing A, B, C, D or E in the answer spaces.

Example: INTERESTING

A philately
B boring
C encouraging
D discouraging
E brown

The most exact opposite is boring, so you would write down 'B' as your answer.

JUVENILE
A youthful
B mature
C undeveloped
D diseased
E adolescence Answer: _____

SOBER
A ruthless
B joyful
C agitated
D drunk
E calm Answer: _____

GAUNT
A thin
B grey
C chubby
D boisterous
E overgrown Answer: _____

STERN
A grumpy
B prow
C anchor
D pointed
E disenchanted Answer: _____

STATIONARY
A pencils
B coach
C moving
D transport
E slow Answer: _____

Please turn over

MORTALITY
A greed
B generosity
C expense
D life
E sacredness Answer: _____

WANE
A wax
B poison
C bedding
D grief
E happiness Answer: _____

PROSPERITY
A healthiness
B stinginess
C sadness
D well-educated
E poverty Answer: _____

MODEST
A luxurious
B helpful
C criminal
D unhelpful
E boastful Answer: _____

LEGIBLE
A severe
B apt
C fattening
D untidy
E lost Answer: _____

Please turn over

SECTION D (20 Marks)

In the passage which follows, some groups of words have been missed out, and where there is a gap you will see a number. All the missing groups of words are supplied at the end of the passage, each labeled with a letter. Then, in the numbered answer spaces provided at the bottom of the page, write the capital letter which identifies the group of words you chose.

The passage below is about sheep-farming in North Wales.

The …..(1) begins with the lambing season when he patrols his flock twice a day for about a month; acting …..(2) in difficult cases; trying to persuade ewes who have lost their lambs …..(3) lamb or one of twin lambs; taking sheep eighty miles to the nearest vet, if necessary; and hoping, by the end of this time, to have eighty lambs; approximately forty ewes and forty *wethers, for each hundred of his flock of ewes. Lambing …..(4) April and shortly afterwards the whole flock is sent up the mountain, the new arrivals having been ear-marked and wool-marked …..(5) and the marks of the farm to which they belong. Mountain farms may either have a mountain or part of a mountain, fenced off, included in their land, or rights to keep a certain number of sheep on an open mountain. There is a prohibition on …..(6) round pieces of open mountain, the sheep …..(7) part of the mountain and rear their lambs there. Because of this knowledge, called 'cynefin', those sheep have an extras value when sold to the next …..(8) into the farm. If the new sheep were bought and put on an open mountain they would have …..(9). The shepherd would tie a front-foot ..…(10) and stay up the mountain with them almost constantly until they knew their place.

(type of ram*)

A tenant who comes
B farmer's year
C begins early in
D to suckle a motherless
E with the signs
F to be taught their place
G as midwife
H know their own
I to their necks
J putting fences round

Please turn over

Section E – Composition (40 marks)

Choose one of the following titles.
Pay special attention to paragraphing, the development of your details, plus spellings, punctuation and grammar.

1. If you could give advice to other pupils of your own age, what would you recommend them to do in order to have a really enjoyable summer vacation? (You can stay in London / the UK if you wish.)

2. Write a story whose first paragraph begins with these two sentences:

   "My football sailed over the fence into my neighbour's garden. We heard a ghastly crashing sound from the direction of Mr. O'Sullivan's greenhouse!"
   (You do not have to copy out these sentences. Continue from this point.)

3. Imagine you are the parent of a boy your own age. What positive values would you teach him to help him grow up in a safe, fulfilled and happy way?

4. As young students, you probably already have a few ideas about what 'ingredients' / details help make a really good school. Select just a few main ones, remembering to explain your ideas about why they are important.

5. A newspaper has a column called "A Schoolboy Speaks". You have won a competition to write this article next week!
   Select one interesting problem you have noticed which has appeared recently in the news.
   Explain how, in your opinion, the authorities could begin to resolve this problem. (You can write about something you have noticed in the UK or abroad.)

Remember to check through your work with care.
END OF EXAM