Q	Sample Answers	Action
1.	• "They sucked it from the bones" • They "wiped their plates clean with bread that Marijke had made"
2.	Flour and a Christmas pudding
3.	(a) Because it is not a food that they are used to, and they are not convinced that it is either edible or tasty. (b) Firstly, Tamar suggests that the pudding " was probably made from the finest ingredients by the head chef of the Ritz Hotel in London." Secondly, he makes the point that the effort made to deliver the pudding would have been too much to waste it on providing something substandard. "Do you think the RAF would send one of their planes through hellfire to deliver a nasty pudding?"
4.	Marijke's response: • Marijke seems impressed and delighted because she laughs. Oma's response: • Oma seems shocked and wary of the pudding because she is 'wide-eyed'.
5.	How does Tamar make a comedy? • Tamar makes a comedy of the pudding by hopping around it and finding it difficult to transfer it onto a plate. How does Marijke make a comedy? • Marijke assumes it will be disgusting and offers an alternative dessert if her predictions are correct.
6.	Marijke is amazed by all the different flavours the pudding has to offer. She compares it to something reprehensible, as though it shouldn't be allowed.

	sighed with pleasure".
7.	When Oma is wary or frightened of something, as shown in the line "alarmed and wide-eyed, put her hands to her chest". Oma expresses her disapproval of having cream in their dishes by "chewing busily, waved her hand in a dismissive gesture".
8.	hellfire – Refers to the chaos of battle, such as gunfire. cloak – The coating given to the pudding by the flaming alcohol outrageous – The shockingly tasty flavour of the pudding startled – That it was unexpected or a surprise expectant – With excited anticipation for something unknown, or in this case, something that has to be kept a secret.
9.	(a) Dart thinks that it refers to a near miss accident in which he could have been choked. (b) Tamar was being sincere when he said this because he explains that this is an English tradition in which the person who finds the coin is the lucky one.
10.	knowledgeable and resilient
11.	• The farm is close to the main action of the war • It has gold-edged bowls • It doesn't have electricity
12.	(a) To set the scene for eating the pudding, the author: • The author captures the reader's attention by drawing an unexpected connection between RAF and delivering good food. • The author also prepares the scene by making the flaming alcohol seem like a sort of ceremony, or like a reminiscence of the war engulfing the characters. • The author draws the attention of both the characters in the story and the readers by using descriptive language and personification such as "A lick of flame ran over the surface of the liquid...for just a few seconds, it wore a transparent cloak of flickering blue fire." (b) To build up the importance of Dart's wish, the author: • Firstly, the writer has Tamar explain the tradition of making a wish. This invites the reader to participate in the excitement. • Secondly, Marike asks Dart to tell her the wish, but she is stopped by Tamar who tells us "It has to be a secret wish, or it won't work." This puts the reader in a position where they must think about Dart may have wished for.
