During this exchange, she "would talk at him non-stop, complaining..." • Fragile – when the call ends, "she fractured into helpless tears." Also, when asked by her daughters question about why their father isn't with them "Mum's lip was shaking and her eyes were like fragile glass." • Tries very hard to keep up appearances and conceal the hardship and unhappiness she is suffering – She evidently loves the father and wants to please him. She has taken the girls to a place that none enjoys, except for the father. It is obvious that she is doing it for him when she says "But your father is Scottish," said Mum, "and he loves it here."
